Teal Thysself

How do I love teal? Let me count the zillions of ways—from swimming pool to thundercloud, and every shade in between (above, clockwise, from lower left):

Zoya nail polish in Lake ($9, zoya.com)

Dior vernis in Bluette ($27, dior.com)

Gucci Infinite Precision Liner in Iconic Ottano ($28, bloomingdales.com)

Chanel Illusion d'Ombre in Griffith Green ($36, chanel.com)

Essie nail polish in Poolside Service ($9, essie.com)

Deborah Lippmann Gel Lab Pro nail lacquer in Get Lucky ($20, deborahlippmann.com)

The Doctor Will C You Now

The New York plastic surgeon Gerald Imber, a longtime favorite of the Park Avenue set, has performed more than 4,500 facelifts but, honestly, he'd rather just sell you a face cream. "I've been the high priest of 'less is more' forever," says Imber (above), who recently launched Youth Corridor skincare. Named for both his 1997 beauty book and his Upper East Side practice, the line includes a nourishing cream, a whipped retinoid gel, and, best of all, Youth Corridor Ultimate Antioxidant C Boost Serum (inset, $305, net-a-porter.com). "Vitamin C is the only thing that gets into your skin and works to build collagen and rejuvenate," Imber says. "Use it for two weeks, and you'll send me a thank-you note."

Gloss Over It

Some people are born with great skin. The rest of us hide our flaws as best we can—and these products make it easy (below left, clockwise, from top right). When I want a smooth finish, I reach for Keyyn Aucoin the Guardian Angel Highlighting Cream ($52, bergdorfgoodman.com), which is loaded with carnuba wax, beeswax, and shea butter. For those who prefer a little pigment in their base—but still want to look as natural as Flower founder Drew Barrymore—there's Flower EE Erase Everything Ultimate Foundation ($13, walmart.com). And the newest addition to my arsenal is the Estée Edit by Estée Lauder Pore Vanishing Stick ($28, sephora.com), which can be applied either under makeup or over it, should any unforeseen disturbance threaten to mar that "perfect" complexion.

Smooth Operator

WHAT W'S BEAUTY DIRECTOR, JANE LARKWORTHY, IS HOOKED ON THIS MONTH.

To Bear Fruit

No one wants to smell like lemon Pledge. But when citrus is a supporting player, it gives a scent a subtle juicy twist (right, from left):

Nest Fragrances Citrine ($68, sephora.com): Freesia and lotus are the main notes, but lemon blossom adds an underlying zestiness.

Dior J'Adore Eau Lumière ($114, dior.com): This famed rose fragrance gets a drop of blood orange.

Gucci Guilty Eau ($99, sephora.com): Layered upon a musky base, mandarin and orange flower have never smelled so elegant.

Diana Vreeland Vivaciously Bold ($185, bergdorfgoodman.com): Lemon and grapefruit give beach grass-y vetiver surprising sex appeal.

Bulgari Goldea ($155, saks.com): Bergamot cools this creamy patchouli and jasmine elixir.

Hermès Eau de Néroli Doré ($129, usa.hermes.com): Saffron imparts an herbaceous note to the orange blossom here.

The New Soft Shoe

My dream workout shoe is a bedroom slipper with support—and these two come mighty close. Adidas by Stella McCartney padded Atani Bounce Sneakers (left, $160, adidas.com) provide a cushy landing for all the leaping I intend to do in the ReXist360 HIIT class at New York's Movement studio. And the foam base in Nike's Lunar Sculpt (below, $100, nike.com) makes these ultralight sneaks feel downright heavenly. I am inspired to bring back the '80s walk-to-work-in-gym-shoes trend—without the Working Girl socks over stockings.
